

THE RACE IN RETROSPECT

The fifth edition of the Hood To Coast Relay, presented by the Oregon Road Runners Club, is now a part of our treasured memories. All who participated in the race were treated to one of the greatest adventures available in the sport of long distance running. Where else can one compete as a team and cover such an incredible distance and variety of terrain during the course of a full day and evening.

The Hood To Coast Relay is overwhelmingly the largest and most popular road running relay in North America. In an atmosphere of declining numbers for most other road races, our race nearly doubled in size again this year. 408 teams registered; representing a field of nearly 4500 runners. 399 teams ultimately were destined to officially complete this arduous journey. The reasons for 9 teams not finishing ranged from physical ones to disqualification.

Runners were mercifully sheltered from the summer's potentially searing heat by partly overcast skies and the shade of the forests along the Coast Range Mountains during most of the day. Two of the most significant changes in this year's race were the use of batons and the awarding of commemorative medals to all members of teams who finished within one hour of the finish time that the race administration had projected for them. 305 of the 399 official finishing teams qualified for them. The competitive field was deeper than ever this year. Several very fast, evenly matched teams competed head to head for the Overall Mens, Womens and Mixed Championships. In all, eight course records were shattered within the race's twelve competitive categories.

The great sense of camaraderie which develops between all 11 members of a team is the underlying core of the whole event. The spirit of running as a team, for 10 other people, and knowing that they are cheering and pulling for you is an experience which is foreign to the sport of road racing. The bond that forms between teammates who are united for a common cause for 20 or more hours is one that will last far beyond the official "finish" of the race. An element of self-discovery actually takes place within participants. Because their teammates are depending upon them, runners push themselves beyond the limits which they have set for themselves in the past. A great deal of confidence and self-esteem is developed from this discovery of new personal physical limits. Runners leave this event on an incredible "high"; they have been given the "Hood To Coast Experience".

Avia Athletic Footwear has committed to be the major sponsor for a national series of relay races to be known as Avia America's Relay Series. The Series will be organized by the race director of the Hood To Coast Relay, Robert Foote, Jr. The distances, teams and logistics will be similar to the format which exists in the Hood To Coast Relay. The winning Male, Female and Mixed teams from the other national races will come to the 1987 Hood To Coast Relay on next year's race date of August 15 to vie for a National Championship.
